

Eriksen Mersinllari

Eriksen Mersinllari, since 2019 has been working at the Quality Assurance Agency for Pre-university Education as specialist in ICT curriculum development. He holds a Master's degree in Software Engineering and a Bachelor's degree in Economic Informatics from the European University of Tirana. He has been actively involved in designing and analyzing curriculum documents for Technology, Information, and Communication (ICT), identifying national needs for curriculum improvement, and managing digital systems related to educational content.

Eriksen also holds the position of National Data Manager for the TALIS 2024 international study organized by the OECD. He has compiled several national teacher qualification tests and developed ICT teaching programs in the pre-university curriculum. Additionally, he has created a numerous of teacher guides and support materials for mastering digital skills and using ICT in teaching and learning process. As a trainer, he has led professional development modules on digital competencies, ICT integration in curricula, media literacy, coding skills and computational thinking. Eriksen is a recipient of the President's Award in the third edition of Interdisciplinary Junior Research 2021 during Erasmus days and has served as a jury member in the national coding challenge organized by the British Council.

His professional development includes numerous trainings and certifications in technology areas and he is dedicated to staying updated with technological innovations.