

Stephanie Alvarado

Director of Global Programs at the Network for Teaching Entrepreneurship (NFTE), brings over a decade of international program management experience. Since joining NFTE in 2011, she has successfully expanded its programs to 33 international sites, impacting over 12,000 students annually. Her expertise lies in strategic planning, stakeholder engagement, and leading cross-functional teams across multiple continents.

Stephanie holds a Master's in International Administration from the University of Miami, specializing in Non-Profit Organizational Management and Sustainable Development. She also earned a Bachelor's in Latin American and International Studies from Colby College. Her professional focus includes program development, impact evaluation, and creating strategic partnerships to enhance educational and economic opportunities globally. In her personal life, Stephanie enjoys spontaneous travel with her husband and two children.